Dear Rainer:

Thank you so much for pointing out this problem. We're fixing it along the lines you suggested and will get the changed version over to jayne this morning for posting to your listserv.

Thanks again,
Ralph

Hi Ralph,

thanks for the wake-up call.

My major concern about the proposed revised program is that a student could complete all the requirements and still be very short of the 39 upper division credits required for graduation. Here's my logic:

of the 24 credits required ANS core courses, only 6 courses (18 credits) are upper division. That leaves 21 upper division credits.

Student must take an upper division ethics course, so that's another 3 credits, and now leaves 18 upper division credits needed.

The 9 credits of electives are not of specified level, so no guarantee any of them will be upper division.

The 4 different concentration areas require 21 credits but there are many lower division classes among the
